ABSTRACT

Sources of free and inexpensive display materials for library and classroom bulletin boards are listed alphabetically under 169 subject areas. Subject areas include various geographic areas, occupations, diseases, health, biology, food, social studies, the arts, industries and technology. Over 1,000 items are listed from 185 sources, and include such visual aids as posters, charts, maps, study prints, and pictures. Each listing gives a description of the material available including its size, the name and address of the source, and information on price if the item is not free.

FOREWORD

This catalog provides sources of free and inexpensive display material for library and classroom bulletin boards. It has been prepared to assist librarians, teachers, student teachers, and educators in obtaining useful resources to support the curriculum. Included are posters, charts, maps, study prints and pictures. Their value for instructional purposes at all levels is considerable. The subjects covered provide many useful ideas for developing interesting, colorful, curriculum-related displays at very lost cost.

Over 1,000 items are listed from 285 sources. Most of the items are free to librarians and teachers. The material is arranged alphabetically under 169 subject areas, with description, size, and source given. All sources are excellent for developing vertical files, teacher collections, and curriculum material centers. Understandably, the supply of certain free items may eventually become exhausted and addresses may change. In some cases, different items will be sent as replacements.

It is recommended that only one copy of each item be requested. The person making the request should ask for a specific title rather than make a blanket request for all free materials available. If possible, use library or school letterhead stationery, identifying yourself as a teacher or librarian, and include a return mailing label. Every letter or request for free materials should contain a statement that the SUPPLIER IS TO DISREGARD THE REQUEST IF THE SUPPLY OF FREE MATERIAL IS EXHAUSTED. There is no need for a supplier to waste time and postage on a service which he offers free. NEITHER THE SUPPLIER NOR THE AUTHOR CAN POSSIBLY GUARANTEE THE CONTINUED AVAILABILITY OF EVERY ITEM LISTED.

Anyone interested in organizing a picture collection should write for the booklet entitled "The Library Picture File: A Complete System of How to Process and Organize" (1972, 11pp., $1.00). For those librarians interested in ideas for improving library services, the booklet titled "A Handbook of Library Ideas: 150 Innovative Practices for the Creative Librarian" (1977, 33pp., $3.50) is useful. Both are available from the author.
